$5,040. Out-of-state students are charged tuition at approximately three times the rate of in-state residents. Mandatory fees, which support student union buildings, recreation, counseling, health services and social programs, are different at the two campuses. Chicago students are assessed $458 per semester ($316 for a two-semester academic year) for fees; students at Urbana-Champaign pay $409 per semester ($318 for a two-semester academic year).

An "average" University of Illinois at Chicago commuter undergraduate, who lives at home with his family, can expect total expenses to be about $6,473 for the academic year. Included are tuition, fees, books and supplies, daily travel and moderate personal expenses. A student living in campus housing can expect these costs to be $11,027 for the academic year.

An "average" undergraduate living on campus at Urbana-Champaign can expect total expenses to be $9,388 for the academic year.

Student Financial Aid

Financial aid totaling $239.7 million assisted students on both campuses in 1990-91. Nearly 97,400 awards were made to 47,400 students. "Gift" aid, including scholarships, grants, fellowships, and tuition and fee waivers, accounted for nearly 40 percent of the total. Employment and loans covered about 60 percent. Students on both campuses earned nearly $60 million from university-related jobs in 1990-91.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS AT CHICAGO PROFILE

The University of Illinois at Chicago (UIC) was formed by the 1962 consolidation of two campuses, the U. of I. at the Medical Center and the U. of I. at Chicago Circle. But UIC's roots date back to the 1890s, when the private Chicago College of Pharmacy and independent College of Physicians and Surgeons became part of the U. of I. By the 1940s, the U. of I. had added other elements, including nursing, dentistry and a major teaching hospital. In 1946, the U. of I. opened a two-year undergraduate division at Chicago's historic Navy Pier, where more than 100,000 students attended classes. In 1965, an entire new campus, called Chicago Circle, opened. Today, UIC is a comprehensive research campus and the largest university in Chicago. Its hospital annually admits over 15,000 patients. It also serves 300,000 outpatients and 40,000 emergency service patients per year. The campus covers 170 acres of a mile southwest of Downtown Chicago.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS AT URBANA-CHAMPAIGN PROFILE

The University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign was founded in 1867 as a state-supported land grant institution with a three-fold mission of teaching, research and public service. Located about 130 miles south of Chicago in the state's heartland, the campus ranks among the world's great universities, especially in research and graduate studies. Its faculty, academic programs, student body and facilities have earned outstanding reputations. The campus's library has the third largest collection among U.S. academic libraries, after Harvard and Yale. The campus, which covers more than 700 acres, is a major midwestern center for the arts and regularly hosts world-class music, theater and dance performances.

... at Urbana-Champaign

The Library at Urbana-Champaign contains nearly 15 million items, including 7.5 million bound volumes. Only Harvard and Yale have larger academic libraries. The main library and 26 departmental libraries are computer-accessible through ILLINET, the state's interlibrary loan system. Special collections include Milton, Shakespeare, H.G. Wells, Carl Sandburg, Proust and Lincoln. Other prominent holdings include Slavic and East European materials; 18th Century English literature; 16th- and 17th-century British history and literature, and maps. The sixth addition to the library stacks features shelves that move along tracks, allowing for greater economy of space.

Landmarks and Museums

... at Chicago

Jane Addams Hull-House (1886), the first settlement house in the nation, was restored by the University and designated a national landmark in 1967. The Nobel laureate Addams rented the Hull mansion in 1889 for her social work among immigrants. The Pavilion (1982) is an entertainment, sports and convention center for events from basketball and soccer to concerts and convocations. The Pavilion, which seats 12,000, is the largest collegiate ice hockey facility in the nation.

University Hall (1965), a 28-story building that houses administrative and academic offices and seminar and conference rooms, expresses the scarcity of urban space by the unusual way the upper stories extend above a sheltered base.

James Woodworth Prairie Preserve (1843), a completely protected preserve, is one of the last natural tracts of prairie-peninsula grassland east of the Mississippi River. Bought by the U. of I. in 1966, located north of the city, between Niles and Glenview.

Allerton House (1900), now a conference center, was built as a private manor at the turn of the century and given to the University in 1946 by Robert Allerton. Formal gardens and 1,500 acres of woodland complement the house, which is 26 miles southwest of campus.

Atgeld Hall (1997), which houses the University library and law school and is home to the mathematics department, is the only Romanesque building on campus. It was designed by alumnus Nathan Ricker, the first graduate (1873) in the discipline of architecture in the U.S.

Assembly Hall (1963), designed by Max Abramovitz, is two concrete bowls, each 400 feet across, placed tip to tip with no interior supports. Permanent in-the-round seating: 10,153. More than 125 buildings are modeled after it worldwide.

Arnold O. and Mabel M. Beckman Institute for Advanced Science and Technology, completed in late 1988, is a $60-million interdisciplinary center for human and artificial intelligence studies.

Foellinger Auditorium (1907), which anchors the south end of the central Quadrangle, was totally renovated in 1986 through the generosity of alumnus Helene Foellinger. Illini Union (1941), which anchors the north side of the central Quadrangle, contains restaurants, meetings rooms, student-organization offices, guest rooms, book store, lounges and more. Built with federal money, the Illini Union generates its own operating budget. Expanded in 1963.

Krafft Center for the Performing Arts (1969), contains four indoor and one outdoor theaters, rehearsal spaces and production shops to support over 300 performances annually. Donors were Herman and Eilona Krafft.

Memorial Stadium (1923), with 69,200 permanent seats, was built as a memorial to the illinois's fatalities of World War I. Harold "Red" Grange, the "Galloping Ghost," scored six touchdowns against Michigan in the 1924 dedication game.

Museum of Natural History (1870) contains nearly one-half million specimens representing the biological sciences, geology, archaeology and anthropology.

World Heritage Museum (1911), a museum of cultural history, contains significant collections of art, manuscripts and textiles from the Near East, Egypt, Greece, Italy, Northern Europe, Africa and Asia.

The Flames compete at the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division I level and are affiliated with the Central Collegiate Hockey Association and the Association of Mid-Continent Universities. The intercollegiate program offers eight men's and seven women's varsity sports. The basketball and ice hockey teams play in the UC Pavilion, which seats 10,000 for basketball and 8,000 for ice hockey. Thomas Russo is director of athletics in the College of Kinesiology.

The Division of Intercollegiate Athletics (DIA) operates the campus' intercollegiate sports program. UIUC is a charter member of the Big Ten Conference. The Fighting Illini compete in Division I of the NCAA. The DIA supports 11 intercollegiate sports for men and eight for women. Memorial Stadium seats 69,200 for football. Basketball is played in the Assembly Hall; seating capacity is 16,153. FY92 budget is $17.5 million; approximately $280,000 is in University tuition waivers. John Mackovic is director of athletics.

Voluntary Support to the University of Illinois

In fiscal year 1991 was $109.7 million, up from $107.2 million the year before.

Nearly 85,300 separate gifts were made to the University of Illinois through the University Foundation in FY91; an additional 4,200 gifts went directly to the U. of I. During the five years ended in June 1991, the University and the University Foundation received more than $404 million in gift income, and gifts from alumni donors more than doubled.
