The University of Illinois, chartered in 1867, welcomed its first class in 1868. The U of I has been the catalyst for many changes and advances. In a complex global society, University faculty, researchers and students answer the call to improve living conditions in Third World countries, educate and prevent devastating diseases such as HIV/AIDS, and help disseminate cultural education and awareness around the globe. All this while remaining rooted in Illinois values and core missions of teaching, research and service.

These are a few points of pride:

- Seventeen Nobel Prizes have been awarded to faculty and alumni.
- Urbana’s library is the largest public university library in the world.
- The state of Illinois has four major research universities —UIC and Urbana-Champaign are two of them.
- Springfield accounting graduates have earned 14 EXCEL awards—more than six times the national average.

The University is on the go. In Chicago, a new Office of International Affairs was established to enhance UIC’s international stature and presence. In Urbana, the much-anticipated Spurlock Museum opened with nearly 45,000 artifacts that are also accessible over the Internet. And Springfield broke ground on a much-needed classroom/office building in October 2002.
